Mars Immortal Planet Mars is a 1967 science fiction film released by Columbia Pictures, produced and directed by Irwin Allen. The screenplay was written by Philip Yordan and Michael Wilson, while the music score was composed by the Sherman Brothers. The film stars an ensemble cast led by Charlton Heston as Dr. Zack, a scientist who must find a way to stop a group of shape-shifters who have been using a volcano on Mars to destroy the world by changing it into an inhospitable greenhouse. The movie was filmed during the summer of 1967, with its principal photography taking place on the sets of Hawaii and the Tarawa Atoll. Principal photography was completed in August 1967, and the film was released on March 2, 1968. The film was a critical and commercial failure, starring Heston in his final starring role. Plot Part 1 In a bio-lab, Professor Zack (Charlton Heston) is working on a way to slow aging. Professor Lamb (Moss Hart) enters with molecular biologist Rodney McMasters (Rodger Donleavy). Professor Lamb wants to know if Zack has made any progress. Professor Zack tells him that he has not. He explains that he is locked in a stalemate with a party called the Morphoids, who are controlling the genetic molecular groups causing the aging process to accelerate. The Morphoids' fuel for this process are the Vents, natural volcanic gas sacs on the planet Mars, which rise from the surface. Zack explains that the Vents are beginning to explode and will soon destroy the planet. In desperation, Zack has come up with a scheme to short circuit the rapid aging process by tying the molecular groups together with negative ions through a fancy electric charge, powered by the sun to sustain their life-giving effect for several years. When he realizes that the Vents have begun to explode, he calls the foreman, Omar (Richard Frank), who is wearing a flame suit to protect himself from the heat rising from the three active Vent sites. Omar and Zack head to the crater and find that Omar's wife, Janie (Fay Spain), has been caught in its grasp. Part 2 The Morphoids return. Their leader, Steven (John Fante), notices the Vents are inhospitable for life. He says that Zack must come up with a way to raise its temperature high enough to allow the creatures to remain submerged in a suitable atmosphere. Meanwhile, Professor Zack learns that three people (one a child
