“The HyperMotion Technology”, which will be brought to the console and PC versions of FIFA 22 in June, is a unique and unprecedented new gameplay feature that will allow players to see and experience what the actual on-field action feels like. This feature enables Xbox One and PC owners to play with a player’s physical movements when transitioning from one phase of play to another. The player will feel the weight and pressure of a tackle, the strength of a block or a sudden burst of pace. “The goal for all of our sports franchises is to immerse players in the emotion of sports entertainment and create the most authentic experience possible,” said Giancarlo Fiorella, Senior Vice President of EA SPORTS. “We’re incredibly excited to continue our partnership with the PES team to bring this unrivaled, in-depth sports experience to the fans.” “This is an amazing leap forward in soccer technology that will transform the way we play and deliver amazing on-field experience to fans,” said Guido Guerrasio, PES Lead Producer. “HyperMotion captures the movement of 22 high-level athletes simultaneously in game and transfers this data into the game, allowing us to create a truly new generation of football simulation.” HyperMotion technology is designed to provide a greater level of authenticity, with a rich and compelling experience that will bring a deeper understanding of the game and help players to experience the emotion of the sport, while delivering thrilling on-field gameplay, whether they’re watching on TV or playing the game themselves. In FIFA 22, the “HyperMotion” feature can be activated via the Pro In-Play Coaching functionality. Players can begin a match with this feature enabled, and re-activate the feature when prompted by the Coach when they need an extra push or a quick change of tactics. The Pro In-Play Coaching functionality is available in the MENA regions, in English for the PAL and JAP regions, as well as in French, Italian and German for the EU region. Alongside “HyperMotion”, FIFA 22 will see the return of a number of game mode changes, including a brand-new offside system, and the brand-new “Man of the Match” awards feature. The all-new COACH cards system has also been expanded to include a range of other new

Career Mode FIFA 22 introduces a new Player Contract System, an improved negotiation system and a new calendar view. Players will now have a calendar view to learn when their next contract kicks in, and how many days are left until their contract expires. For example, a transfer that happens in the middle of the transfer window will automatically be set to expire on the last day of the transfer period.

We're introducing new ways to manage your player's contracts and make playing your team easier. For example, a player that is contracted can now also have a no-trade clause added to their contract. This is especially useful when you look at your player's contracts, and spot some alarming stats. For example, an "Age Gap" rating might go up drastically, or the use of an unusual contract mode may be required.
